Comments: Paramedic program requirements vary by state and other individual factors; credentials, training, training delivery method, job experience, criminal history or military service.

Student applications are reviewed on a case-by-case basis. There are no standardized requirements across all 50 states for the Paramedic program.

Colleges offer courses in continuing education and curriculum that provide training for Advanced EMT.

Please contact Robert Whistler, EMS Coordinator, for individual state specific information on AEMT program point(s) of contact, which include, name, phone number, email, and physical address.

National Registered Paramedics | National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians (nremt.org) webpage provides informational links on EMT National Certification. State License and Re-entry.

The National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians, https://nremt.org/, maintains NCCA accreditation for EMR, EMT, AEMT and Paramedic programs. The National Registry is recognized in every state in the United States, and 46 states use the National Registry certification as a basis for licensure.

The National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians website maintains a State EMS Agency Map for contact information and weblink to each state's Office on EMS.
